Laying of Corner Stone.

This greatest day in the history of the New York City Ponce Department began at 11 o'clock with the laying of the Corner-Stone of the new Posco Headquarters, at Grand and Centre streets. The ceremony completed, Mayor McClellan, Ponce Commissioner McAdoo and the invited quests in carriages went to the hier-chants Association, in Brondway, to present to the traffic squad a new hag. After that here was a function, official but without speeches, and then the great parade with five thousand men mounted and on foot left the Hattery, in its march northward.

After the ceremony a new flag was given toth e Traffic Squad, gayly caparisoned and mounted on shining chestant horses. In front of the Merchants' Association Building the Traffic Squad was made to feel that it had done something for the benefit of the citiens of New York and was sent on its way with a long speech from the Commissioner, who told the history of traffins something, who told the history of traffins the sent of the sent o way with a long speech from the Commissioner, who told the history of traffic regulation in New York.

After the luncheon, at which many men prominent in municipal and political affairs were present, the great parade started. Headed by the regimental commanders, 5,000 blue-coated and brass-buttoned men swung into line. With a soldierlike precision the men marched between lines of spectators up Broadway to Fourteenth street, then to Madison a venue to Fortieth street and then to Fifth avenue. Down the avenue the procession continued in the avenue the procession continued in the worth monument was reached. There the entire force on parade received the order "at rest." Mayor McChellan took his place in the reviewing stand and the honor men who distinguished themselves for bravery and valor had medals pinned on their breast. This was the last function of the day.

Near this letter was a second letter, which read:

"Dear Charlie: Sweetheart, how can you treat me in this way? What for the game between the Superbas and have I done? I am half crazy at your treatment of me. I went out this the Phillies. morning, walked about until my feet, as well as my heart, were sore, and the cross way you talked to me over the telephone. Your promises were not kept with me. I love you better than my life. How I love! I love you so much, and to think I have to go and leave you. I hate so to die.

"This morning when I got up I thought I would kill myself the first thing, and then I said I would try again, and, when you spoke so cross over the 'phone to me I went right away and bought the revolver. The Quaker aggregation, it is true, numbered more brilliant stars among their athletes, and were confident of daking the majority of firsts. The Philadelphians figured on seven firsts out of the thirteen events, which would don't the New Yorkers only sky. But Columbia was as sure of the ability of their team to corrait the application rumber of seconds and thirds and thus offset the majority of firsts for Pennsylvania, turning the margin in favor of the blue and white. Pennsylvania had on hand not only a large delegation that had accompanied the team to New York, but hundreds of graduates curned out to cheer the fiest-footed wearers of the beloved colors. By the time the first sprint was run off the entire oval was banked with the rival colors of blue and white and blue and red, hundreds of the fair sex heins present to help out in the gay color schame.
